

PRESUMED DAM: On July 1 2014, there was a litter of 4 puppies at the Creamer/ Snow household (referred to from this point forward as “CRSN”). The 14-month old fatally attacking pit bull-mix, named Bubba, was one of them. This brindle female pit bull pictured below, Lexi, is presumed to be the dam. Along with photos of this litter taken at that time and posted to Facebook, Lexi is seen in the yard on July 31, 2014.

SIRE PIT BULL-MIX: On October 1, 2013, CRSN posted that their male pit bull-mix named Bad Butts was 1-year old (technically near 1.5 years old). Note his facial white markings and mass at this age. His large size is where the “mix” comes in, likely a war dog descendant (mastiff-type), but certainly not a boxer. CRSN comment: “My Pitt one years old love Bad Butts so much”

SIRE PIT BULL-MIX: On April 11, 2014 CRSN posted a photo of Bad Butts saying that the dog just turned 2-years old. CRSN comment: “he just turned 2 he is rotten.” Another commenter added, “Also he is huge!” Again, the mix here is certainly not boxer.

2014 LITTER: The 4-puppy litter was born on July 1, 2014 according to CRSN. This shows the puppies at 4-weeks old. Bubba, the fatal attacker, is in the front. No white markings on his face. The other light brown dog is a "replica" of its sire, Bad Butts. There were 3 males and 1 female in this litter; one of the brindles is the female.

2014 LITTER: About a week earlier, a CRSN relative comments about Bubba's male littermate: "Looking like his daddy." That would be the puppy's near replica coloring and facial markings as its sire, Bad Butts (See page 3).

2014 LITTER: The male brindle puppy was given to a CRSN relative in late August 2014. In a comment, a family member makes clear who the sire is. CRSN comment: “Lol I bet he is look at this father bad butt.” Bad Butts sired the July 2014 litter containing the pit bull-mix named Bubba. The brindle dam, Lexi, seems to have been the only female in the home at the time and half the litter was brindle. This August 2014 post is the last mention of Bad Butts we could find in CRSN Facebook pages. Lamarkus’ family members said Bad Butts had been gone for some time before the fatal attack.

2014 LITTER: The fatal attacker, Bubba, at 4-months old, posted on November 2, 2014. This is the last known Facebook image of Bubba before the police photos were taken on September 28, 2015 after the boy's death. On that day, Bubba was 14-months old (just shy of 15-months). This same age was also given by the dog's owner.

Additional Information:
 6-weeks after the death of Lamarkus (November 11, 2015), CRSN household posted a photo of Bubba's littermate at 6-months old -- the replica of its sire Bad Butts. Of the 4 puppies born in July 2014, it appears only one was sold/given away, the male brindler. CRSN kept the remaining three "in some fashion," including the killer, Bubba.

 Brandon Michael I know the breed of the dog as well as owners very well but it shouldn't matter what the breed ... Any animal whether man's best friend or not can be hostile at any time. Judging a breed of dog because of an attack is over rated!!

 Brandon Michael Just because it was a pit it means nothing... A dog has ALL dog instincts regardless of breed and i personally know the owners dogs and they ARE FRIENDLY AND OVERLY EXCITED... As I said before it's a tragic devastating loss for BOTH PARTIES!!

NOTE:

Even if Bubba was acquired by the household under different circumstances than presented in this lineage PDF, nothing changes the reality of the sheriff's office photos, which show at the "very least" this dog is a pit bull-mix.
