			Notes: Plays rough, met female dog (Sunny, old dog) jumped toward her, rough sniffing, tried to play by jumping on her, but she's old and moved away. Sunny did solicit his attention by bowing but when he came up to her, she jumped away. Dog didn't growl, just too energetic for her. Introduced him to male (Herschel) and he approached excitedly. Hackles up for a couple of seconds, but after sniffing other dog, he solicited attention. No growling, no dominant actions. Dog has no leash manners. AJ 563
M14-269862	17-Sep-2014	INTERPARTY	Pete Parker is pretty super, and has that super strength. He's a handsome boy, that's pretty freindly with people, he just doesn't know his own strength at times. Pete Parker did meet other dogs, he was a little pushy at first but settled with time, but slow monitered introductions are recommended. No cats for this big boy, since he was just a bit too interested in them here. Pete Parker would benefit from continued training to help with his leash manners. He's always greeting you with a smile in his kennel, ready to go for his next walk. Come give this boy a chance and he'll be sure to win you over.

He said at the dog park and there were mostly an "elderly" set with dogs that were not playing in this manner and it concerned the people there so they went out of the dog park. Then they went back in and the same thing happened so they left. Then on another day, when [REDACTED] came home, the evening ritual was to have Rukus "go to his bed" and wait to be greeted, while his Bulldog and his two Boston Terriers barked at Rukus to stay in his bed. Rukus growled in his bed while looking at his wife. He said he didn't know if Rukus was growling at the dogs barking at him or his wife. The wife had been bit on her thumb by their Argentino Dogo that they used to have and was traumatized and was afraid of big dogs ever since. This unknown target growl was too much for her to handle. He said she may have had a "flash back." The husband stressed that he thought Rukus was a great

Rufus was very well behaved and followed commands to sit and down. He was an excellent choice to show how positive reinforcement works, as he responded well to commands, and also responded appropriately when non-desired behavior was ignored. We had fifteen new volunteers plus four mentors, plus three staff members in the training room. over half of the new volunteers were children under 18 yrs old. He was solid with everyone - very friendly and playful. He will make an excellent companion to whomever adopts him. --dlc
